WHAT IS GRADUATE MARINE ENGINEERING (GME)?

Graduate Marine Engineering (GME) is a one-year Diploma program that allows students of mechanical engineering to delve into the world of shipping. This program educates the students about the ships and different kinds of machinery onboard with their functions.

Graduates from GME programs undergo comprehensive training to acquire the skills and knowledge required to work on ships and contribute to the maritime industry. Some colleges that offer this program directly work under the DG Shipping of India which makes the complete process of selection and admission easy and seamless. After passing out from a maritime college, a candidate can work as a junior engineer and later as a 4th Engineer after appearing for MEO Class IV Exams.

WHY IS GRADUATE MARINE ENGINEERING IMPORTANT?

Graduate Marine Engineering is one of the most important courses for the Merchant Navy in India. Most students who are pursuing Mechanical Engineering or Naval Architecture can get into the Merchant Navy through a Graduate in Marine Engineering course. There are many merits of GME in the Merchant Navy, for instance, low Cost.

When compared to B.Tech Marine Engineering, GME is cheaper and within the reach of many mechanical engineers who belong to the middle class of society. GME is like a bridge between what you learn in mechanical engineering and how to apply that knowledge of yours on the ship.
